FAULT OF THE INJURED.

Ninety per cent of the street traf-fic accidents in New York City are declared by the police department to to due to carelensness or other fault of the injured. This assertion is bas ed on a new system of reporting such accidents on forms classifying them recording to cause, location, nature, perfousness, vehicle, ago of victims and hour. This tubulation utterly upsets the popular cotion that the fault a generally with the drivers of vehicles, carticularly automobiles. Of the accidents in August 903 were charged to the fault of the injured. only 51 to the fault of drivers, 45 pt defects in vehicles, 24 to skidding and 69 to other causes. Of the persons struck by vehicles 670 were struck as result of their own carelessness and only 31 due to the fault of the drivers, and this includes bicycles. The Depth Of A Cough

P THE mere violence of a cough

If THE mere violence of a cough were any criterion the purely nervous cough would be the meat alarming of all, and a severe pneumonia cough would scarcely deserve my affection at all.

A great many people come complaining of a "cold on the chest"—whatever that may mean. They feel a "tearing and a polling at their very vitals" every time they cough. And, locating the legion by the symptom, as is the way with popular diagnosis, they conclude that there must be they conclude that there must be something the matter with their lunes or bronchiel tubes.

As a matter of fact about nineteen out of twenty cases of "cold on the chest" coming to the doctor for relief are either troubles of the larynx or something higher up, and not in the chest. A simple irritation in the roof of the throat (the pharynx) will cause a cough that seems to come from way down in the very base of the chest, and a mild laryngitis will be accompanied by the most frequent and emphatic, if not elephantic cough

Somebody is always asking us to prescribe for count, in apite of our rules and regulations, and notwithstanding the fact that a cough is only a symptom which comes from one cause in one case and from a very different cause in another.

However, in order to appeare the demand and save the country, we here present what we believe to be the most efficient all-round cough medicine for domestic use. This is the formula:

Citrate of sodn ..... 1 ounce Powdered Reorice .... 1/2 ounce Flaxsed meal ..... 2 ounces Glycerin . . . . . . . . . . ounces Chlereform . . . . . . . ounce Water . enough to make 1 quart

Pirst boil the flaxseed in the water, gradually stirring it in. After half an honr let it cool, then add the Heorice, the giveerin and the chloroseveral times in the course of the day. The following day, strain through fine muslin and keep tightly corked. The dose is a teaspoonful every hour or two for a child over three years; for an adult a table-spoonful every hour or two.

By the way, this cough modleine never cures. It only helps to soothe and relleve irritation.
